Wisconsin-born Rob Gonzalez is a multi-talented pianist and singer/songwriter, recently honored as a New York Times "Emerging Artist". Since age 5, Rob has displayed a natural ear and heart for music. Rob fine-tuned his skills at Berklee College of Music in Boston and has been composing, recording and performing ever since. His recent album, "All Is Right With The World," features multiple Grammy winning musicians, including band members of Paul McCartney, Elton John and Sting.

Inspired by the philanthropy and volunteerism of his parents, Rob is committed to using his talents and love of music to "make a difference" in the world. In November 2006, he founded Melvinares.com, an internet music distribution company that offers affordable access to music by participating independent artists, each with a social conscience. One-third of Melvinares.com income is donated to charitable organizations that fight global poverty.

"Our students and staff are still raving about Rob's amazing performance, but more importantly, they've been talking about how 'cool' it is that music and 'regular people' can make a difference in the world. Everyone should see Rob Gonzalez perform and listen to his message—you won't forget it!"

- Ben Barton, Principal
La Crescent (MN) Middle School

Rob's refreshing philosophy that "music can make a difference" supports a societal shift as summarized in Dan Pink's A Whole New Mind. Mr. Pink states "The last few decades have belonged to a certain kind of person with a certain kind of (analytical) mind. The future belongs to a very different kind of person... These people—artists, inventors, caregivers, big picture thinkers—will now reap society's richest rewards and share its greatest joys."
